EMPOWERED FAMILIES KANSAS

ABOUT THE PROJECT

Empowered Families Kansas is a 4-year demonstration project of the Kansas Coalition Against Sexual and Domestic Violence (KCSDV).

In 2016, KCSDV was one of 12 sites nationally to be awarded the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Specialized Services for Abused Parents and Their Children grant. KCSDV focused on three strategies to build evidence-based practices that improve outcomes for children and youth exposed to domestic violence and their non-abusing parents or caregivers. This report focuses on one strategy of Empowered Families Kansas – the child welfare project.

CHILD WELFARE PROJECT STRATEGY:

Improve the response by Kansas child welfare professionals to the needs of children and their non-abusing parents or caregivers when domestic violence and child abuse co-occur.

HISTORY

In 1999, KCSDV began partnerships on the state level to develop and implement safe and appropriate responses to the co-occurrence of domestic violence and child abuse.

In 2003, KCSDV partnered with the Kansas Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (Kansas Department for Children and Families) to conduct the first-ever safety and accountability assessment of Kansas child protective services’ response to domestic violence. Key findings informed strategies and a robust child and youth project was developed that focused on improving child welfare responses to the safety needs of children and their non-abusive parents.

Administration changes in 2012 resulted in the elimination of project staff and funding over a 4-year period. During that time, capacity to appropriately respond to the needs of children and families experiencing domestic violence significantly decreased. No active projects addressing this need were available in Kansas until KCSDV formed the Empowered Families Kansas child welfare project in 2016.

CHALLENGES

■ Child abuse is closely linked to domestic violence – more than 30 studies illustrate a co-occurrence rate of between 30-60%.

■ In these cases, the safety of children and their non-abusive victim parents are inextricably linked, requiring unique safety considerations and strategies by the child welfare system.

■ The true prevalence of domestic violence in Kansas child welfare cases is not measured. Kansas child welfare professionals believe it is present in 25-50% of their caseloads.

■ Over 63% of Kansas child welfare needs assessment respondents reported they have not received specialized training on how to provide child welfare services to families experiencing domestic violence. Over 53% were unsure whether their agency has policies or procedures that address domestic violence.

NEXT STEPS

- Implement data tracking methods that measure the prevalence of domestic violence in Kansas child welfare cases.
- Work with child welfare service provider agencies to develop and implement policies, procedures, and practices that safely address domestic violence.
- Build collaborative relationships between child welfare and domestic violence service providers.
- Provide frequent and ongoing training and education, as child welfare service provider changes and staff turnover make it difficult to sustain capacity.

“There is a need to build partnerships in Kansas that can ensure the work to address the co-occurrence of domestic violence and child abuse is sustainable and ongoing. The lives of many Kansans depend on it.”
